HUNTING FOR LEWIS & CLARK TRIBES IN OKLAHOMA

When Lewis and Clark traveled up the Missouri River in 1804, they had to hunt for the Otoes, Missouria, and Osages (who were out on the Plains hunting). Visitors traveling the Lewis and Clark Trail today still have to hunt for those tribal nations. Why? Because they are now located in Oklahoma. In the decades following the Lewis & Clark Expedition, Federal Indian policy removed those tribes and many of their neighbors to what was then known as "Indian Territory" – today's state of Oklahoma.

Among the tribal communities, whose ancestors had contact with Lewis and Clark, and who welcome you to visit them in Oklahoma are: Otoe-Missouria Tribe, Red Rock, OK; Osage Tribe, Pawhuska, OK; Pawnee Nation of Oklahoma, Pawnee, OK; Citizen Potawatomi Nation, Shawnee, OK; Kaw Nation, Kaw City, OK; Absentee Shawnee Tribe, Shawnee, OK; Eastern Shawnee Tribe of Oklahoma, Seneca, MO; and Shawnee Tribe, Miami, OK.
